YACHTING

This sport first appeared in the Olympics in 1900 but was not held in 1904. The Los Angeles Games of 1932 introduced for the first time a current competition category, the International Star Class. An Olympic sailing committee in cooperation with the U.S. Yacht Racing Union administers the eliminations and qualifying regattas of competition in the Games. The 1984 races will take place in the Pacific Ocean off Long Beach, California, and will be the first Olympic yachting competition since 1956 to be near competition sites of other sports.

Carl Lewis
The American athlete replicated Jesse Owens's feat of 1936 by winning four gold medals, in the 100m, 200m, 4x100m Relay and Long Jump.

Daley Thompson
Considered by many the greatest all-round athlete of all time, Thompson defended the Decathlon gold medal he had won four years earlier in impressive style, leading from the first event to the last.

Los Angeles 1984
A last-minute boycott by the Soviet bloc countries did not take the shine off another impressive haul of British medals, with Sebastian Coe, Daley Thompson, Tessa Sanderson (Javelin), Malcolm Cooper (Shooting) and a young rower called Steve Redgrave, as one of the Coxed Four, winning gold medals. The Paralympic Games were split between New York and Stoke Mandeville, the Buckinghamshire location which had begun staging what is now regarded as the precursor to the Paralympic Games back in 1948.

Alick Wickham born 1886

"Alick Wickham, a Solomon Islands lad from Roviana Lagoon, introduced the 'crawl' stroke to the world in 1898 in Bronte Baths, NSW, Australia. The stroke was modified to become the Australian crawl by the famous Cavill Brothers. Another successful refinement, the American crawl, was developed after demonstration at the San Francisco Olympic Club in 1902. From all of these evolved Freestyle, the fastest stroke now used in competitive swimming".
